Last Date for Student to Withdraw: April 7, 2025

Course Description: An introduction to theatre as a collaborative art form through the critical analysis of its historical context, production, theory, and connections to theatrical literature, including the western canon. The student will explore dramatic structure, techniques, and various organizational elements. Designed to instill a curiosity and interest in all areas of the theatre. This is not an acting class.

Class Meeting Time: T_Th 9:30AM – 10:45AM

Class Location: 0851

Credits: 3 credit hours

Prerequisites: Placement at the college level or completion of the appropriate exit-level development course(s) with a grade of C or better.

Offered: FA, SP, SU

Distribution: Meets AA General Education Core, Humanities requirement

Required Textbooks and Instructional Materials:

Wilson, Edwin, The Theatre Experience, 15th Ed. (2023). New York; McGraw-Hill.

ISBN: 978-1-265-75526-3

Supplemental Textbooks and Instructional Materials: (if applicable)

Additional materials may be assigned by the instructor to supplement the required material

Methods of Evaluation:

The Objectives will be met through class discussions, play readings, in-class activities, assigned reading, video presentations, attendance at live performances, an essay paper, and exams.

1. Assigned chapter readings will be used to facilitate classroom discussion and group activities. Exam material will come from readings and class discussions/activities.
2. Students will complete 5 written exams. Final exam is a cumulative exam, covering questions most missed from previous exams plus new material from final chapters and material not tested on yet at end of semester.
3. Students will write one paper. The paper will be a critique of the semester's PSC production. Details on the writing of the paper will be discussed prior to the assignment. An outline specific to the paper will be provided by instructor when the assignment is given.
4. The class after the final performance of the play will include a special after-performance examination of the strengths and weaknesses of the performance. Participation in this exercise is crucial to the appreciation of theatre and therefore is worth 100 points towards the student's final grade for the semester.
5. Playwriting Day is a day spent in class working on a playwriting exercise. Copious fun will be had by all.
6. Throughout the semester there will be individual and group exercises in class. Participation in these will earn students' required Class Participation Exercises points. Any points scored above the minimum are in-class extra credit opportunities to improve the students' semester grade. If a student is absent on Class Participation Exercise days, the student will have to arrange make-up work with the professor.

Options include performing a role or production crew duty such as costumes, makeup, sound, light, set construction, running crew, or any backstage duties. Interested students can discuss this option with the professor.

Tardy: Habitual or excessive tardiness may be converted to absences. Tardiness is a disruption to the class and shows a lack of organization on your behalf, a lackadaisical attitude towards your work, and a lack of respect for your classmates.

Attendance Policy: Regular and punctual attendance is required. The fourth absence is considered excessive. The allowable absences are to provide for student illness as well as permit the student to take care of emergencies and/or personal business. Upon the fourth absence, the student is required to schedule an appointment with the instructor during office hours to determine if the student will continue the class. Excessive absences can result in negative semester grade damage.

Student Expectations: Students enrolled in this course can expect the following:

1. clearly identified course objectives;
2. productive class meetings;
3. a positive learning environment;
4. opportunities for appropriate student participation;
5. effective instruction;
6. positive and appropriate interactions;
7. assistance with meeting course objectives during and beyond class hours;
8. evaluation of student performance and appropriate and timely feedback; and
9. clear and well-organized instruction.
